An accident, unhappily fatal, occurred on the 27th April on the Tokya-Kyoto Railway. . Mr Hida Hamagore, Chief of the Estates Bureau in the Imperial Household Department, was a passenger by the train going southwards. A Shizuoka, where a stay of a few minutes is made Mr. Hida left his carriage for a necessary purpose, but owing to the large number of passengers and the insufficiency of the accommodation, he was unable to accomplish his object. At the next station but one, Fuji-yeda, the train stops for a moment only. Here Mr. Hida alighted, but before he could re-enter his carriage the train was in motion again. He nevertheless attempted to regain his sont, but missed his footing and fell between the platform and the train. On-lookers say that he succeeded in avoiding two carriages as they passed, but that something projecting from beneath the third apparently caught his sleave and dragged him ander. The train was arrested in a moment, not, however, before a wheel had passed over the unfortunate gentleman's body. He expired immediately. Mr. Hida was fifty-nine years old His record of service is long and distinguished. In 1859, under the Tokugawa Government, he held the post of Naval Instructor, and was sent to America the same year in a Japanese man-ofwar. In 1862, having risen to the rank of Naval Inspector, he had command of the ship it which the Shogun proceeded to Kyoto for his historical interview with the Emporor. Subsequently detailed for civil duty, Mr. Hids obtained steady promotion. Chief of the Estates Bureau, he was a chokunin of the First Class, with Second Class of the Fourth Grade official rank, and the Third Class of the Rising Sun. It is scarcely necessary to observe that this sad event emphasises a point to which we draw attention in the autumn of 1887, namely, the insufficiency of the accommodation at stations on Japanese railways. Since that time great improvements have been effected, and we believe that the Authorities intend to run carriages with closets on all lines of any length. It is an essential measure, not alone in the cause of public decency, but also because, with things as they are now, such accidents as that recorded above are liable to happen at any moment. Despite the great care usually exercised by the railway officials, passongers will rush to eatch a train in motion when, like Mr. Hida, having been obliged to elight at a by-station, they see themselves in danger of being left behind .- Mail.

HARODATE:

The Government have just laid a tramway from Mr. J. R. Thompson's jetty, and erected at the sea end of it two iron cranes for landing the iron pipes that are to be used in constructing the water-works for the supply of the town. The tram runs to the upper end of the town, where there is to be a big reservoir to receive and store the water from a point on the Akarawa, about five miles eastward of the town Austin Arms Hotel & Building Co., Limited at the foot of the mountains. The reservoir being on the south-west side of the town, pipes will be laid from it through the atter, and the water of the Akagawa will be given the necessary head by pumping works on the spot. It is a pretty big undertaking, but nachinery and steam-engines are capable of anyhing now-a days. Many years ago the Harbour-master here advised the Authorities to cut canal from a village called Kamada, lying ust on the outskirts of the town, so as ito lead thence the water of a river that rushes through he village with great force, and make it deliver supply of pure water in the neighbourhood of he point where the reservoir is now being built. THE CRAWFORD CASE. LONDON, 17th April. The Press generally approves of Lord Cross's ecision in the Crawford case.

The Times says that L rd Reay's failure to et promptly and vigorously on the finding of he Commission constitutes a serious lapse of adgment. So far as regards the native magisrates, The Times regrets that it should require he authority of Lord Cross to impress upon ord Reay the importance of recognising and cting on the vital elementary principles of British administration.
